

Your SheetCheck feedback

CANDIDATE Jordan Bailey	TEST SheetCheck	COMPLETED 30 Sep 2026
----------------------------	--------------------	--------------------------

Thank you for completing SheetCheck. You worked through a set of hands-on spreadsheet tasks under timed conditions — a demanding format, and completing it is an achievement in itself. This summary highlights where you showed real strength and where focused practice will make the biggest difference.

Where you showed strength

Formula-first habits

Everywhere a task could be done by formula, you used one — so your answers would keep themselves up to date if the data changed. That habit is exactly what the test looks for.

Where practice will help most

Banking the quick wins first

Time ran out before some tasks could be attempted. Under timed conditions, a first fast pass — doing every task you're sure of before returning to harder ones — usually lifts results more than extra knowledge.

Try this: Next timed exercise, give yourself a rule: nothing gets more than two minutes on the first pass. Mark anything slow and come back to it.

Keeping momentum

This was a strong sitting, and the habits behind it — formula-first working, structured data — are exactly the ones that scale to bigger problems. Keep applying them to real data and the Advanced skills will follow naturally.
